PREFATORY COMMENTS

This Compendium complements, rather than repeats, the contents of the Database. Whereas the Database is a detailed account of all of Van's works and their various revisions and retitlements, the Compendium is a listing of all of Van's books in the English language and their various editions and printings. And, like the Database, I will continue to revise it as I learn more.

Features new to version 2.0:

(1) An asterisk (*) is placed next to printings that have been physically examined by myself and then double-checked to death. It therefore indicates that most of the information present is based on a first-hand examination (especially regarding price, ISBN, and number of pages). Of course, facts about such editions that have been gathered from secondary resources and not the book itself are also included. (This is not to say that entries without an asterisk are not accurate, only that I have not personally examined a copy.) There is always the possibility that there may be a printing that I am unaware of that may resemble an asterisked edition in all but one or two details — as always, I'd appreciate hearing about these!

(2) A new section listing select non-fiction books by and about Van. Non-fiction works by him (such as The Money Personality) have been placed in this section along with works written by others (such as H.L. Drake's A.E. van Vogt: Science Fantasy's Icon).

(3) The full ISBNs are now given (where known) for each entry. This will make a specific printing easier to identify and locate when trying to find the book through an online bookseller. Please note that books printed before the late '60s have just serial numbers, as these were used before the ISBN system went into effect.

I hope to include all magazine appearances of his works in a future edition of the Compendium (and maybe even anthologies), but it will be a while before this happens since his works were printed in innumerable places and tracking down reliable information is difficult, time-consuming, and sometimes expensive work.

Many people have asked me to make another Compendium file listing editions in other languages, such as French, German, and Italian. Although I think this is a wonderful idea, I do not feel I am qualified to do this. I also prefer to constrain my efforts to an area I feel confident about, and that I can continue refining. I would rather stick with doing one thing exceptionally well, rather than lots of things in a mediocre fashion. Endeavors have been made in cataloging foreign-language editions, especially French and German, and are easily found on the internet (such as Philippe Raimond's website, for French editions).

LAYOUT

Books are listed in alphabetical order solely according to title, and not by the actual text. If a certain text was printed under other titles, those other titles are mentioned under the main heading — click on one and you will be taken to a list of all editions with that title. (For instance, the second Null-A book, The Players of Null-A, was usually published in the UK as The Pawns of Null-A — each heading lists only editions with that specific title.) To complicate things, sometimes an altered text was printed under the same title as an unaltered text, so I do my best to determine which printings contain which version.

Blue text (other than topic headings at the tops of pages) can be clicked on — underlined items will cause your browser to launch and go to a particular URL; items without an underline link to areas within this document and so do not require an active internet connection.

If you're searching this list for specific information in the Compendium — such as how many covers Paul Lehr did — the word-search function of your PDF reader is very handy. Simply select "Find..." from the edit menu (Mac users can press Apple + F) and type in "Paul Lehr". The first search will turn up the first instance. To search for the next occurrence, select "Find Again" from the edit menu (Mac users can press Apple + G). When it reaches the last occurrence, it goes back to the top of the list and starts over again.

SOURCES

I have depended heavily on Phil Stephensen-Payne & Ian Covell's bibliography A.E. van Vogt: Master of Null-A (Galactic Central Publishing, UK, May 1997). I have however been able to add a substantial number of editions not listed in Stephensen-Payne, as well as correcting various errors, adding more and fuller information, and identifying many additional cover artists.

Grant Thiessen of Pandora's Books Ltd. has also been of invaluable assistance, and is to be thanked for his tremendous help in making this list more accurate and complete, especially with regard to Canadian printings and explaining the ISBN system to me.

With regards to cover artists, many thanks must be given to the book Infinite Worlds: The Fantastic Worlds of Science Fiction Art by Vincent Di Fate (Wonderland Press, New York, 1997), a large volume containing an excellent selection of art from well over a hundred different artists. Hours of pouring over this book in recent years has paid off; I've been able to tell the cover artist of many editions by recognizing their style. Thanks must also go to Mr Axelsson's site The Weird Worlds of A.E. van Vogt, which has cover-scans for editions I don't have, and to have something to compare this list against to help verify and match-up cover artists — in many ways, this document is deliberately designed to complement Mr Axelsson's excellent cover gallery section. Yutaka Morita's van Vogt site also contains a great many coverscans for rare editions published in the U.S., U.K., and Japan.

Also, various people have dropped me a line giving additional information, especially on who may have done certain covers. These helpful and very knowledgeable people are given individual credit on the Update History pages.

But the most thanks must go to my own A.E. van Vogt book collection, which is continuing to grow beyond the confines of my bookshelves and causing quite a housing shortage. Much of this collection can be seen elsewhere on my site.

CONTACT INFORMATION

Anyone who has anything to add to this list (whether it be a tiny bit of information, or a printing not listed here), has any corrections or suggestions to offer, or would like to ask a question about anything van Vogtian or bookish in nature is invited to write to me at icschi@earthlink.net.

FORMAT KEY

Each entry, whether it be a novel, collection, or non-fiction follows the same basic format:

Book Title

Authorship notes [non-fiction & collaborative works only]

— (Original Title) [can be clicked on to see editions under that title]

— Other Title

"Story" / Novel Contained (Year) [only applies to omnibuses; see the Database file for contents of collections]

Edition — Publisher                      Year      Month              Price              ISBN / Serial #              Pages              Cover Artist
— Special notes regarding specific printings

Italicized book titles are novels

Bold titles are collections or omnibuses (collection of novels)

Plain-Type are non-fiction

An asterisk (*) next to the edition number indicates that whatever information is present is based on a first-hand examination — usually only the publication month is information not present in most editions, so it has been collected from secondary resources.

The publisher's name is Underlined for hardcovers; softcover are Italicized; Plaintext indicates a mass-market paperback.

When a currency is not American dollars, but British pounds or Australian/Canadian dollars, it is indicated by a UK or Au or Ca after the price. UK prices are self-explanatory, but UK is added to facilitate hunting down British editions by skimming the price column.

The ISBN/Serial # column contains either a serial number (for books printed before the universal introduction of the ISBN system), or the book's full ISBN. Serial numbers are in italics to make it clear that it is not an ISBN. For books published by DAW I include the UE/UY (etc.) prefixes within the ISBN, because many booksellers list the code beginning with the letters rather than the ISBN — I therefore give both. The DAW serial numbers on the front cover also usually include an extra digit — for example, their edition of The Book of Ptath has the serial code UE1930, while its ISBN is 0-87997-930-5, which leaves out the "UE1." Therefore, for each DAW entry I italicize the part of the serial code not found in the ISBN — so the entry for this book would read "0-8997-UE1930-5."

N/A means Not Applicable. This is common in the ISBN or price column for special limited-edition printings, and in the Cover Artist column when no artwork was done (such as limited-edition hardcovers, many nonfiction works, and some hardcovers issued without dust jackets).

A question mark "?" is used to show (1) a complete lack of any information; (2) speculative information; or (3) unconfirmed information.

HOW ISBNs WORK

Now that I list the full ISBNs for each edition, you may be interested in knowing how ISBNs work and what they mean. I'm indebted to Grant Thiessen for explaining this to me — of course, any errors or misconceptions you may find below are my own.

An ISBN consists of four segments, which I'll explain using the example of the September 1977 Jove/HBJ printing of Destination: Universe! whose full ISBN is 0-515-04412-1.

0- This means that the book is in English. "1-" means the same thing. Why there are two designations for this is something I'm still not sure about. Also, some publishers left this off altogether until the late '70s, while others started including this in the early '70s. If you're using a used book website such as ABE.com, and are doing a search using a specific ISBN, you should try sticking on a "0-" just to be on the safe side, even if there is no prefix in the full code given in this Compendium — many booksellers tend to stick a 0- on for good measure whether one can actually be found in the book's ISBN or not.

-515- This is the publisher's distinct identification code. All ISBNs by this Jove/HBJ imprint will have 515, all Del Rey books have 345, all Berkleys have 425, New English Library 450, and so on. Sometimes (not always), if a publisher is bought out by another, its identification code will change. Occasionally it will be changed for goodness-knows what reason. For instance, DAW Books' ID code changed from 87997 to 88677 sometime around early 1985 — I have no idea why. Also, publishers with separate imprints often use separate publisher codes.

One of the nice things about this ID code is that if you come across a full ISBN without seeing the book or knowing anything else about it, you can at least know who published it if you're familiar with the codes. You'll also notice that newer or smaller publishers have very long codes, while the older and larger publishing firms have shorter ones. You can tell who was at the front of the line when they were handing these out, and who came along years later after the choicest codes were taken. For instance, a new small publisher called Mad Norwegian Press (who does not publisher any van Vogt books) has the incredible code of 9725959! That leaves them only 1 digit for their book designations. They've switched publisher codes a couple of times in the last few years, so I think they keep filling up their quota.

-04412- This number is chosen by the publisher to designate the particular book. Ace Books often add 1 to the final digit for each subsequent reprint, which is quite handy, but in almost all cases there is no sequential pattern with reprints.

-1 This is the check digit. Using a mathematical formula (which can be seen on this webpage), the numbers of the rest of the ISBN are multiplied and added, etc., and the last digit of the final result is this number. It's used to validate the ISBN, but apart from that I'm none too sure what other uses it has. However, I have no idea why some ISBNs end in "-X" or even know how that's possible.

"The First Rull" (1978)

1 — TOR	1999	August	$13.95	0-312-85239-8	288	Hubert Rogers
— Funnily enough, the cover art for this edition originally appeared on the front of Astounding for the first installment of The Players of Â (October 1948). Also, TOR's 2002 edition of The World of Null-A has the artwork from the second installment of Players (November 1948) — both TOR books erroneously credit the cover art to "Mark Rogers"

1 —	New English Library	1979	August	£1.00 UK	450-04515-3	127 + 141	?
—Hervé Hauck, who owns a copy, tells me that this thick paperback has "two page counts like an Ace Double, but the books are not upside down but sequential." The Weapon Makers is first, followed by The Weapon Shops of Isher , with three pages of advertisements for other NEL titles between the two novels. Also, the cover art for this omnibus shows the miniturized cover art for the 1979 NEL edition of each novel against the background of a planet hanging in space with rows of orange dodecahedrons in orbit.
